The basic Essays composition consist of:

1. entry
2. main part
3. conclusion

The absence in the composition of one of the elements is considered as an error and is taken into account when assessing. The composition should be thought out and clear. All the main ideas in the work must be carefully justified by analyzing the text of literary works.

INTRODUCTION – introduces the topic, gives preliminary, general information about the problem that is behind the proposed topic.

In the introduction:

1. contain the answer to the question asked on the topic
2. submitted your opinion, if the title of the topic is a reference to the opinion of the applicant
3. contain a fact from the biography of the author or characterized the historical period, if this information is important for the subsequent analysis of the text
4. formulated your understanding of literary terms.

The MAIN PART of the work is an analysis of a literary work in accordance with a given theme.

The main part should be avoided:

1. a retelling of a literary work
2. presentation of information that is not directly related to the topic.

In the main part it is necessary to demonstrate the knowledge of literary material, the ability to logically, argumentatively and stylistically competently express their thoughts.

The main part is to check how well the topic is understood.

The task of the CONCLUSION is to sum up, summarize what has been said, complete the text, once again drawing attention to the most important thing.

The final part should be:

1. short, but capacious
2. organically connected with the previous presentation

In conclusion, the personal attitude of the writer to the work, its heroes, the problem can be expressed. It should be stated correctly, without excessive enthusiastic assessments, have a clearly defined meaning and should be prepared by the material of the main part.

Clear, strictly appropriate to the theme of the last paragraph of the essay is able to brighten up many shortcomings. An unfinished essay is no more attractive than an unfinished pie.
